四、閱讀測驗

Schools in the 2010's will be working together with businessmen and offices, and factories will be full of schoolchildren and teachers. Since the reforms of the nineteenth century which got children out of factories, the British have disliked mixing learning with commerce. But the past ten years of high youth unemployment rate have encouraged most schools to create new links with employers to provide their pupils with more marketable skills. And in the next ten years, when youth labor will become scarce rather than plentiful, many employers not yet working with schools will be encouraged to do so.

【3】16. One of Britain's aims of the nineteenth century social reforms must have been _____.

- ① to provide pupils with more skills ② to create new links with employers
 ③ to separate learning from commerce ④ to mix learning with commerce

【2】17. In Britain, the 2010's will see a _____.

- ① new increase in youth labor ② higher demand for skilled workers
 ③ a high youth unemployment ④ weak link between schools and factories

【3】18. In the past decade, the British schools have taken their pupils to factories because _____.

- ① youth labor is plentiful
 ② the employers encourage them to do so
 ③ they have had to prepare their students for employment
 ④ the British think it's good for their children to work there

【1】19. Which of the following is not mentioned in the passage?
